Applications at the clerk's office here for marriage licenses indicated that January really might amount to something as far as marriages. There were some 12 marriage licenses issued this month, which is twice the February average. There were nine in February. So far there have been 4 marriage licenses issued this month, and the month is half gone.

—o—

Darkleaf ran across an old timer in Appomattox county who had come to the trade for 70 years, last fall. A friend took pity on the old fellow and offered him a printer job. So the printer went over to be examined, and the doctor told him he was sound enough to be let loose. Whereupon, the old boy packed out on the job offer.

Fire Destroyed Sears Station Here Sunday

Lack Of Water Prevents Firemen From Quenching Blaze Here Sunday

While Appomattox shivered in the lengthening grip of one of the worst blankets of snow in a decade, fire broke out in the new service station of J. E. Sears, on route 460 on the edge of town, late Sunday afternoon, and swept on unchecked to destroy the structure, save for the stucco walls.

The fire originated in the basement of the big two story building. It no doubt came from a furnace heated to capacity. Dense clouds of smoke stopped efforts to curb the flames at their source, and rescue squads concentrated their efforts on saving merchandise and furniture.

Several hundred people were attracted by the fire alarm and the mountain like clouds of smoke and lurid glare of flames seering the skies, and blocked all highways near the doomed station. Dozens of tourists automobiles added to the crowd.

With the town fire engine standing by, helpless due to lack of water, townspeople quickly cleared the building of everything movable. A large store of automobile tires was among the many items saved.

The loss was approximately $3,000.

Business was resumed at the station Monday, when a temporary building was put up by Mr. Sears.

Capitol City News Review

(Special to Times Virginian)

Richmond, Va., Feb. 12: While Virginia's citizens are shaking them selves free of the most rigorous winter in a score of years, the state's legislators, many sniffling with colds, are pushing onward thr ugh a mass of legislative matters that will have to be settled by March 7, the date of adjournment. A deal was consumated on this, that day, legislative pay stops and it is a certainty the members will go home.

The spotlight of attention shifted during this week from doings of the assembly to other dramatic events.

First was man's battle with the elements, this time brought close home. Ice locked rivers and harbors in Tidewater Virginia were a matter of concern.

Tragedy stalked the crusty ice on the Chesapeake Bay and the interest of the whole nation was centered little Tangier Island and the fishing colony that lives there. One man, William Hunter, died of exhaustion in an effort to carry food across the ice to the islanders.

Amid the distractions of a national political hullabaloo, as the coming coming presidential election, snow and blizzards even much of the country, with Richmond's streets drifted deep with snow, the general assembly moved onward with its biennial task.

Heavy committee work has been discharged and the end of the week may see final action on several of the jimp-jack bills on the calendar. Spirited contests have been waged over minor amendments to the ABC law, the Spiers "overload" truck bill the bill for organization of state's lawyers to maintain ethical standards, and other measures.

But the bulk of the most important work has yet to be done, although the session is half over.

Delegate W. N. Neff, of Abingdon introduced a resolution, which was passed, to ascertain whether a state law for crop control is required, and if so, to draft appropriate measures. Both houses approved a resolution for the appointment of a committee of seven to visit Washington to consult with the department of agriculture on the question.

Virginia's entire House of Representative delegation in Washington, including Thos. G. Burch, mentioned a while back for governor, say they expect to run for reelection to congress this year.

Thus far only representative Flannagan has opposition.

Auto deaths through Tuesday totaled 46 for the year in Virginia.

He was a retired office manager of the Western Union Telegraph Company.

SUPERVISORS MEET

The county board of supervisors met here yesterday in regular monthly session. Routine business was attended to. Work has begun on the new county budget, which will be announced soon.

Doubt As To Leaf Market Opening

Will Certainly Be Open Again By Monday February 24.

An air of uncertainty surrounds the date for the reopening of the dark tobacco markets after the holiday declared two weeks ago to give the open markets time to arrange a $500,000 R.F.C. loan to keep prices at 80 per cent of last year's grade average.

We are in receipt of notice from the tobacco association announcing that the association warehouses will open Monday February 17.

A resolution asking the buyers to attend sales on that day was adopted by the association this week.

However, we are informed today that the open warehouses will not be ready to open Monday and there is doubt as to whether or not the buyers will renew purchases until the floors are open.

It is definitely assured that the markets will be open by February 24, however.

Attends Convention

William Burke, of Appomattox, is in New York this week attending a convention of national and state bank examiners specializing in trust departments. The convention is at the Waldorf Astoria hotel.

Mr. Burke is a state bank examiner for Virginia, being in charge of one a district over six other examiners and comprising 62 banks.

He is considered the best authority on trust departments among Virginia's examiners and for that reason was chosen to attend this convention.

Fredericksburg Plans Event

Fredericksburg, Feb. 12: Virginia officialdom will visit this historic city on February 22, the birthday of George Washington, as guests of the people of Fredericksburg.

The chamber of commerce of Fredericksburg, sponsors of the celebration which will see the first link of a great "Cherry Tree" Memorial Boulevard started, is making plans to accomodate one of the largest crowds ever to visit the city. The governor, Mrs. Peery, and members of the governor's staff the entire state legislature and their wives will be brought here on February 22 on buses which have been loaned for two days.

The group will be feted with a banquet and dance, quartered for the night, taken on a historical tour, entertained at a luncheon and then attend the celebration on the Washington Boyhood Farm.

Attention Veterans

There are many veterans in the county who have not yet filled out and sent in their applications for the bonus. This should be attended to at once. The Appomattox Red Cross chapter has secured all of the necessary blanks, and has kindly offered to assist the veterans in filling out same. The Rev. R. H. Humphreys, chaplain of the Lynchburg Post of Veterans of Foreign Wars, has volunteered to assist the local Red Cross in this work. Mr. Humphreys and Miss Edith O'Brien will be at the Bank of Appomattox Saturday, February 15 from 10 to 3. Thereafter the veterans must secure this service there on Tuesdays and Fridays. If a veteran has borrowed on his bonus he must bring his pink slip and discharge paper. If he has not borrowed he should bring his discharge and bonus certificate.
